London Mayor Sadiq Khan has endorsed Nick Clegg to succeed him in the assembly. Khan told The Times, "I'm backing Nick Clegg to be the next Mayor of London because I know him personally and I know he's a man of integrity and calmness, as well as a genuinely decent and likeable man." Clegg told BBC London: "We're talking about a fantastic city. "There's an enormous amount for us to do and I'm really looking forward to a new chapter in my life." Clegg was the deputy leader of the UK Liberal Democrat Party until he lost the party leadership to David Cameron in January. He has remained part of the party since. Clegg said he didn't expect Labour leader Ed Miliband's party to win the May elections, calling Labour "awful" and its plan for nationalisation of part of the energy industry "a mess." But he said if Labour won the election, he'd keep out of the way and not actively seek election in 2020. Khan says he's endorsing Nick Clegg because he 'knows him personally' London's new City Hall will be adorned by an extravagant blue crystal chandelier
